

Slater Investments & Stockopedia acquire Company REFS

Slater Investments is pleased to announce that it is buying Company REFS alongside investment analytics service, Stockopedia.com.

Slater Investments plans to use the REFS financial database and intellectual property for internal research purposes while Stockopedia will integrate the REFS subscriber business.

Mark Slater, Chairman of Slater Investments, said:

“My father devised REFS (Really Essential Financial Statistics) in the early 1990s. It was a revolutionary source of data and was head and shoulders above the competition for a long time. Slater Investments will invest in the database and I believe that it will become a much more valuable research tool which will enhance our investment process.”

Edward Page Croft, CEO of Stockopedia, said:

“Jim Slater and Company REFS were key inspirations when we founded Stockopedia. We're delighted to carry the baton, ensuring that existing REFS subscribers can continue to access first-class fundamental data and screening tools on the web.”
